Cece Suryana, Felicitas Sri Marniati, Tofik Yanuar Chandra,

We are pleased to introduce The Journal of Legal and Cultural Analytics (JLCA), an international, peer-reviewed, and fully open-access journal devoted to the scholarly exploration of law and culture. Our mission is to advance intellectual discourse through the publication of high-quality research that rigorously examines the intersections of legal systems, cultural frameworks, and interdisciplinary approaches.

JLCA welcomes contributions that address both contemporary and traditional legal issues, as well as studies that draw from anthropology, history, sociology, and related disciplines. By maintaining a fully open-access model, the journal ensures that all published work is freely available to a global readership, thereby promoting the widest possible dissemination of knowledge.

Published quarterly in February, May, August, and November by Formosa Publisher, JLCA seeks to provide a platform where legal scholarship and cultural analysis converge to shape a deeper, more nuanced understanding of society. We look forward to continuing to serve as a space where academic rigor meets global accessibility, and where diverse perspectives contribute to the advancement of legal and cultural studies.

Happy reading
