We are delighted to present the latest issue of the Journal of Language Development and Linguistics (JLDL), a peer-reviewed academic journal dedicated to exploring the broad spectrum of language acquisition, linguistics, and interdisciplinary studies connected to language and communication. JLDL is published biannually, in February and September, by Formosa Publisher, and aims to provide a platform for scholars, researchers, and practitioners to share original and high-quality research.

In this edition, readers will find a wide range of articles addressing both theoretical and practical aspects of language development. Topics include language acquisition strategies, discourse analysis, cultural influences on language, and descriptive approaches to linguistic evolution. Each article has been rigorously reviewed through a double-blind peer-review process to ensure academic integrity and contribution to the field.

We are proud to share that JLDL is indexed in reputable databases such as EBSCO, Google Scholar, Dimensions, Index Copernicus (ICV 2023: 84.56), and more. This ensures that all published research is widely accessible and globally recognized.

We extend our deepest gratitude to all contributing authors, peer reviewers, and editorial team members for their dedication and scholarly input. Without their tireless work, this publication would not have been possible.

We invite educators, linguists, language practitioners, and policy makers to explore the insights presented in this issue. We hope the knowledge shared will inspire further research and positively impact the academic and practical realms of language and linguistics.

Happy reading
